To whom it may concern

Ayra Singh was involved with our organisation in the process of brainstorming and ideation on her idea of developing "SG Siblings" application. We enjoyed listening to this social innovation idea of hers and are excited to potentially partner in her exciting entrepreneurial journey of helping her fellow under-privileged Singaporeans.

We find her idea to be potentially useful in following areas:

1. Access to Education: Allowing underprivileged children to have access to educational resources.
2. Peer Learning: Fosters a sense of collaboration and community among children, creating a supportive learning environment & enhancing communication skills.
3. Empowerment and Confidence Building: By actively participating in the children-to-children network, both the questioners and the answerers gain a sense of empowerment.
4. Exposure to Different Perspectives: Children from diverse backgrounds and regions can come together in the network. This exposure allows them to learn from each other's experiences, cultures, and approaches to problem-solving.
5. Scalability and Reach: The app can be accessed by children from different locations, providing educational support to underprivileged children regardless of their geographical limitations.

Potential scenarios where this idea can be implemented include:

1. Local Communities
2. National Initiatives
3. Online Platforms
4. Collaboration with Existing Educational Initiatives

Our best wishes and good luck Ayra - keep it up!
